Our guest speaker, Lorna McKenzie, spoke about bringing the ritual of celebration into daily life

About our March event...

Our March event was a fantastic networking opportunity with each of us brainstorming ideas for generating work for and with one another. By the end of the lunch, Lorna had suggested that Kylie create a baroque recorder ensemble amongst her piano students. The ensemble could then perform as wandering minstrels at Lorna's celebrations. Isn't that what networking is all about.

We also discussed creating a wiki for our group where we can all share information and ideas, with posts and links and other resources. For the moment though, the facebook group is also holding discussions and sharing event dates.

Lorna talked to Liz about photographing her quilts and costumes, and Liz talked to Lorna about potential event venues, such as the glow worm tunnel at Newnes Plateau. Imagine having a special ceremony there.

Like all networking women a few phone calls and emails were made during the lunch, which resulted in Lorna booking a shared spot at the Blue Mountains Business Expo coming up in May.

All whilst looking over the view to Solitary and watching the canyons trekking down into the valley for a splash. Next we hope to hear Lorna performing a ceremony while the canyons come down Empress Falls.

Who do you know who....

Do you know any women who would like to be involved? Please feel free to forward them this flyer—the only limit being this group is about women who are genuinely motivated to improve their business and network with other like minded women. Don't forget to RSVP for catering purposes.

Women@Net@Work is the working title for a new group of women who originally met through Women With Altitude. Women With Altitude was a thriving women's business network which encouraged the sharing of ideas, experiences, knowledge and support in that unique and ego-free way that comes naturally to women. At our inaugural meeting women shared their ideas and news in such an informal, non-pushy and respectful way that it would be hard to detect that the "networking" was even taking place. That's the true beauty of the subtlety of the way women can work together. It's almost sublime. It is a dynamic that was sadly missed when Women With Altitude finished a while back. Like the phoenix rising from the ashes, we hope this new group which has arisen from that void, will build towards the beneficial qualities offered by WWA.

Join us in March at the Conservation Hut

If you or your girlfriends would like to join Women@Net@Work (a working title) for lunch at 12.30 on April 20th, 2010, please contact WhoNeedsASecretary@gmail.com to place a booking.

Meetings will be held every 4-6 weeks at 12.30 on a Tuesday at a venue in the Blue Mountains.

Invitations are extended to all women in business who wish to share business ideas over a leisurely lunch.
