Our guest speaker, Lorna McKenzie, will speak about bringing the ritual of celebration into daily life

About our Guest Speaker...

Women in business know more than anyone how important it is to take time out from life and reflect, to nurture our loved ones and bring a sense of celebration of life into our work. Giving “it all” to the business is the fastest path to burn-out, and something all successful business women must learn to balance out, if we are to manage our work, our social and love life, our creativity and still have energy for the pragmatic side of life.

Lorna McKenzie from Offbeat Ceremonies presents a fresh approach to celebrating the big events in life—naming ceremonies, weddings, anniversaries, blessed beginnings and the sadness of endings. One of the greatest sources of joy in life can come from interweaving a sense of celebration into every day events as well, and Lorna is the ideal inspiration.

“Rites of Passage ceremonies are a brilliant way to acknowledge a change in your life direction, you can celebrate very important rites of passage such as graduation, a new job or new business venture, moving into a new house, establishing a new community group or project, falling pregnant, reaching your third age, or your Saturn return, all of these events should be celebrated!”, Lorna said. Join us on the 24th to hear Lora’s ideas about bringing celebration into your life.

Who do you know who....

Do you know any women who would like to be involved? Please feel free to forward them this flyer—the only limit being this group is about women who are genuinely motivated to improve their business and network with other like minded women. Don’t forget to RSVP for catering purposes.

Women@Net@Work is the working title for a new group of women who originally met through Women With Altitude. Women With Altitude was a thriving women's business network which encouraged the sharing of ideas, experiences, knowledge and support in that unique and ego-free way that comes naturally to women. At our inaugural meeting women shared their ideas and news in such an informal, non-pushy and respectful way that it would be hard to detect that the "networking" was even taking place. That's the true beauty of the subtlety of the way women can work together. It's almost sublime. It is a dynamic that was sadly missed when Women With Altitude finished a while back. Like the phoenix rising from the ashes, we hope this new group which has arisen from that void, will build towards the beneficial qualities offered by WWA.

Join us in March at the Conservation Hut

If you or your girlfriends would like to join Women@Net@Work (a working title) for lunch at 12.30 on March 24th, 2009, please contact WhoNeedsASecretary@gmail.com to place a booking.

Meetings will be held every 4-6 weeks at 12.30 on a Wednesday at a venue in the Blue Mountains.

Invitations are extended to all women in business who wish to share business ideas over a leisurely lunch.

If you would like to contribute a motivational story to share in our newsletter, please email your copy to our editorial team.
